ABATIER, Paul, b. St-Michel de Chabrilanoux, dans les Cévennes, 3 Aug. 1858. Educ.: Faculté de Théologie de Paris; devint immédiatement, 1885, vicaire de l'église St-Nicolas de Strasbourg. En 1889, le gouvernement allemand lui ayant offert une situation supérieure par laquelle il serait devenu citoyen allemand, il demanda à rester simple vicaire. Cette demande fut considérée comme une manifestation politique et il fut expulsé. Revint dans ses montagnes natales et se fit nommer pasteur à St-Cierge, village qui depuis quinze ans était sans pasteur. Mais sa santé était ruinée et, après quatre ans d'efforts, il dut renoncer à la parole, et se consacrer entièrement aux études historiques. Publications: En 1885 avait déjà publié le texte grec de la "Didachè" accompagné d'un commentaire qui attira l'attention des spécialistes, mais c'est la "Vie de St-François" qui a rendu son nom populaire. La première édition française parut en novembre 1893. Un an plus tard avaient déjà paru des éditions en presque toutes les langues de l'Europe, même en Suédois et en Polonais. La première avait été la traduction russe faite sous la direction de Tolstoï. Quelques érudits allemands ayant contesté certains points de cette œuvre, Paul Sabatier commença alors pour les spécialistes une série de travaux destinés à montrer le travail scientifique dont la "Vie de St-François" n'était que le résultat. Delà la "Collection d'études et de documents sur l'histoire littéraire et religieuse du moyen âge," pour laquelle il fit appel à la collaboration de ses contradicteurs eux-mêmes. C'est un spectacle nouveau que cette union d'érudits de toutes nations et de tous cultes travaillant sur le même chantier qu'un Huguenot français. Le t. i., publié en 1898, a provoqué de tous côtés d'autres travaux qui deviennent chaque jour plus nombreux et plus importants. Il est intitulé, "Speculum Perfectionis seu sancti Francisci Assisiensis Legenda Antiquissima, auctore fr. Leone. Nunc primum edidit Paul Sabatier." Le t. ii. est intitulé, "Fr. Francisci Bartholi Tractatus de Indulgentia Portiunculæ. Nunc primum integre edidit Paul Sabatier." Le t. iii.: "Fr. Elie de Cortone, étude biographique par le Dr. Ed. Lempp." Le t. iv.: "Actus h. Francisci et Sociorum ejus. Edidit Paul Sabatier." En mai 1901, il découvrit à Capistrano, dans les Abruzzes, la "Regula Antiqua Tertii Ordinis," qui depuis des siècles avait échappé à toutes les recherches. Il en profita pour commencer les "Opuscules de Critique Historique" qui paraissent par fascicules trimestriels. Enfin vers la même époque retrouva le texte Latin original du fameux recueil des Fioretti dont il donna deux éditions, une pour les érudits, mentionnées plus haut "Actus," etc., l'autre populaire, "Florietum S. Francisci Assisiensis. Liber aureus qui italice dicitur I Fioretti di san Francesco." Enfin en 1902 a organisé la "Société Internationale des études Franciscaines" inaugurée solennellement à Assise le 2 juin. Parmi les distinctions dont il a été objet nous n'en mentionnerons que deux. En 1898 la Ville d'Assise par un vote unanime de son "Consiglio Comunale" lui a décerné un titre qu'elle n'avait plus conféré depuis Garibaldi, celui de "Cittadino d'onore." En 1899, il a été nommé membre de l'Académie Royale de Rome. Adresse: à Chantegrillet, "près Crest" (Drôme), France.

WELD-BLUNDELL, Charles Joseph; b. 1845; s. of Thomas Weld (secretary to his uncle, Cardinal Weld), who succeeded to the Ince Blundell Estates in Lancashire in 1840, and assumed additional name of Blundell; m. 1884, Charlotte, e. d. of Col. Hon. Chas. Lane-Fox, b. of Lord Conyers. Educ.: Stonyhurst College, Lancashire; Christ Church, Oxford. Travelled widely with especial view to Natural History and Botany. After 3 years in Spanish America, where he made a special study of the question Scent v. Vision in Birds of Prey, he published a compendium of his arguments in favour of the latter view in the Times, Oct. 1872. In Bolivia he was entrusted with a special mission to report to Lord Clarendon as to the advisability of renewing diplomatic intercourse with that Republic, and held a commission to report upon and examine the country between the Vermejo and Pilcomayo Rivers, and the country of the Abas, from the Government of Melgarejo. At 40 marrying, and soon after succeeding to the Lancashire estates, he abandoned travel for Art, Politics, and Journalism, lecturing on Tithes, writing for Dublin Review, Tablet, Liverpool Mercury, and Catholic Times, for which paper he wrote a series of Polemical Articles, afterwards published in book form, The Church of the Tithe. On Southport Electoral Division being created, he stumped the South-Western Division, and was offered the seat provided he would follow Northcote and Salisbury, finally accepting candidature of Preston, which he contested unsuccessfully 1885 on the Home Rule "Ticket" as a moderate Liberal, winning more votes in that Conservative centre than any Liberal since her conversion. He received Mr. Gladstone at Ince Blundell for his opening of Home Rule campaign in Lancashire, 1883, Mr. Weld-Blundell being the only large landowner in that county who supported his Irish policy. Defeated at Preston, he was offered Chatham as a solatium by the Liberal Caucus; but through his holding strong views against the then Liberal crusade against the Peers, and in general against the Newcastle programme, was tabooed by the Liberal Caucus. Since when he has been mainly employed in developing his Lancashire estates, and after a protracted study of the foreign methods of forestry, has succeeded in clothing the bare sandhills of his coast between Southport and Formby Point with pines in a manner that attracts thither thousands yearly, and bids fair in time to rival Bournemouth. He resides a great part of the year at Lulworth Castle, the splendid home of his ancestors in Dorset, to which estates he is the next male heir, and where he received his present Majesty in Coronation year. He wrote largely at one time (mainly in Catholic publications) against Vivisection; is Vice-President of the Anti-Vivisection Society and British Association, 1903; has been President of Lancashire Agricultural Society, and Chairman of Urb. Dist. Council of Birkdale; also President of the Catholic Young Men's Society, 1886. His Lancashire seat has a European reputation for its art
